Who says you need to be a millionaire to own a great piece of original artwork?

That's the premise behind Sheridan Road Gallery's upcoming show, Ordinary Beauty, which will showcase small-scale artwork by dozens of local artists, all available for a modest price of $100.

"Art enriches our lives, and everyone should be able to enjoy it," says artist and gallery owner Diane Nelson.

"This is a great way to not only see what local artists are creating, but to take a piece home."

Canvases range in size from 6" x 6" to 10" x 10" and embrace a variety of styles and media. Art photography will also be showcased. Arlington Heights resident Tobi Abrams will feature her work at the gallery.

When Nelson opened the Sheridan Road Gallery in downtown Highland Park last year, one of her goals was to make art an everyday experience for residents.

Before turning to art full-time in 2001, Nelson was one of Chicago's best-known medical illustrators. You may see her work in your doctor's office, since she created many of the anatomical charts in use today. Nelson graduated from the Art Institute of Chicago and studied painting with Judith Joseph, David Gista and Didier Nolet. She has exhibited her work in the
